CROSSING SIGNALS TO BE INSTALLED

City Fathers Notify Railroad
Co. That Danger Must Be Eliminated.

Discussions of considerable importance were brought up before the common council at its regular meeting in the city hall Monday evening. Every member was present. During the course of the session, the council adopted a resolution authorizing the city clerk to instruct the Grand Trunk railroad company to place a safety device at the Jefferson street crossing. Petitions are also on file for a watchman at Sarah and Margaret street crossings, which will be taken care of in the near future.

Atty. William Crabb of South Bend, legal advisor of the Grand Trunk Railroad company; H. C. White, trainmaster, W. L. Dayton, supt. of signals, and C. Harding, supervisor of bridges and buildings, appeared before the councilmen with the purpose of installing a new device, called the "Big Wag" system at the above mentioned crossings, instead of placing a watchman there. The city has agreed to give this appliance a test.

After the regular session was called to order by Mayor W. W. Dodge the following monthly report was submitted by the city controller, C. E. Lukenbach: Balance on hand February 28, 1922, $19,734.37; cash receipts for the month of March amounted to $15,244.46. Total cash receipts $34,978.83. Disbursements, $21,456.84. Balance on hand March 31, 1922, $13,521.99. Claims amounting to $7,561.23 were allowed.

HARRY C. MYERS and PAULINE STARKE in "A CONNECTICUT YANKEE IN KING ARTHUR'S COURT"
WILLIAM FOX PRODUCTION

When Mark Twain published "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," the William Fox special film version of which is to be shown at the Temple theater on Wednesday, April 5, he expected to arouse a lot of discussion—and he did. He had become sick and tired of hearing about "the good old times," and was determined to write a book showing, in humorous fashion, that the knights of old were by no means all they were cracked up to be. So he transplanted a Connecticut Yankee to the Court of King Arthur, and proved that the modern American is more than a match for the ancient knight.

Anticipating discussion, Mark Twain prefaced the first edition of his book with the following: "The ungentle laws and customs touched upon in this tale are historical, and the episodes which are used to illustrate them are historical. It is not pretended that these laws and customs existed in England in the sixth century; no, it is only pretended that, inasmuch as they existed in the English and other civilizations of far later times, it is safe to consider that it is no libel on the sixth century to suppose them to have been in practice in that day also."

"One is quite justified in inferring that wherever one of these laws or customs was lacking in that remote time, its place was filled by a worse one."

Handy Extinguisher Saves Car From Fire

The fire department was called to the corner of Third and Hill sts., about 10:30 Sunday night where a Studebaker auto had caught fire. It was said that a messenger telephoning to the Central station took a considerable period and by the time the fire apparatus had arrived the blaze had been extinguished by the use of a fire quencher that was part of the equipment of a passing car. The hook and ladder was called out earlier in the evening to put out a roof fire that started at the Miami Country club. The damage was reported as very light.

LINCOLN.
Norma Talmadge comes to the Lincoln theater today in the title role of "DeLuxe Annie," her latest Selznick Revival, which is still registering a distinct success as a stage play in many of the largest cities. The picture was adapted for the screen by Paul West from the play by Edward Clark, and directed by Roland West. Surpassing even her supreme characterizations in "Ghosts of Yesterday" and "By Right of Purchase," this charming screen star has inspired her countless admirers to new enthusiasm with her portrayal of the heroine in "DeLuxe Annie."
